Introduction

The arrest of three men in the July brutal and savage beating death of Gerald King, Jr. forced the concepts of hate and homelessness to the forefront of local minds. Despite the gruesome and seemingly singular nature of his death, King's death was one of many angry and vicious attacks committed against people experiencing homelessness that occurred during 2002. In August, a bus driver in Los Angeles ran over a homeless man in a battle of "wills," after refusing to let the homeless man board his bus. In October, an 18-year-old man in San Luis Obispo climbed a fence and jumped from it several times landing on a homeless man's head. Also in October, three Navy Men pelted several homeless people with paintballs. In Springfield, Ohio, another homeless man was sleeping on a porch during a hot August night when he was set on fire.

Discrimination against people experiencing homelessness has become accepted in today's society. Michael Savage, the host of the radio talk show Savage Nation, said on April 23, 2002 that, "In a sane society, they [bums] would be beaten up, thrown in a van, and thrown in a work camp." Statements such as these reinforce negative and violent stereotypes against homeless individuals. The continual size of news reports of hate crimes and violence against people experiencing homelessness has led the National Coalition for the Homeless (NCH) to publish a four-year study examining hate crimes and violence committed against people experiencing homelessness from 1999 – 2002. The fourth consecutive report, "Hate, Violence, an Death on Main Street USA: A Report on Hate Crimes and Violence Against People Experiencing Homelessness in 2002" was also released.

Over the past several years, advocates and homeless shelter workers from around the country have seen an alarming increase in reports of homeless men, women and even children being killed, beaten, and harassed. In 1999, NCH, along with its Civil Rights Work Group, a nationwide network of civil rights and homeless advocates, responded to this concern and produced the first compilation of its kind, No More Homeless Deaths! Hate Crimes: A Report Documenting Violence Against Men and Women Homeless in the U.S. The following year (2000), NCH published A Report of Hate Crimes and Violence Against People Who Are Homeless in the United States in 2000. In 2001, Hate. A Compilation of Violent Crimes Committed Against Homeless People in the U.S. in 2001 was completed. These reports present the known incidences of hate crimes and violence against the homeless population. These annual reports aim:

1. To compile the incidence of hate crimes and violence against people who are homeless that NCH has received and reviewed in order to document this alarming trend.
2. To make lawmakers and the public aware of this serious issue.
3. To recommend proactive measures to be taken.

The term "hate crime" generally conjures up images of cross burnings and lynchings, swastikas on Jewish synagogues, and horrific murders of gays and lesbians. In 1968, the U.S. Congress defined a hate crime as a crime in which the defendant intentionally selects a victim, or in the case of a property crime, the property that is the object of the crime, because of their race, color or national origin (Title 18 U.S.C Section 245). The first federal law to combat hate crimes, 18 USC Section 245, passed in 1968. It mandated that the government must prove both that the crime occurred because of a victim's membership in a designated group and because the victim was engaged in certain specified federally-protected activities -- such as serving on a jury, voting, or attending public school.<sup>1</sup>

Hate crimes are commonly called bias-motivated crimes, referring to the prejudice or partiality of the perpetrator against the victim's real or perceived grouping or circumstance. Most hate crimes are committed not by organized hate groups, but by individual citizens who harbor a strong resentment against a certain group of people. Some are "mission offenders," who believe they are on a mission "to cleanse the world of a particular evil." Others are "scapegoat offenders," who project their resentment toward the growing economic power of a particular racial or ethnic group through violent actions. Still others are "thrill seekers," those who take advantage of a vulnerable and disadvantaged group in order to satisfy their own pleasures.<sup>2</sup> Thrill seekers, primarily in their teens, are the most common perpetrators of violence against the homeless population.

For documenting hate crimes and violence NCH relies on news reports and information relayed to us by homeless shelters around the country for the data and documentation that it includes in its reports. Although NCH acts as the nationwide repository of hate crimes/violence against homeless people, there is no systematic method of collecting and documenting such reports. Many of these violent acts go unpublicized and/or unreported, thereby making it difficult to assess the true situation. Often, homeless people do not report crimes committed against them because of mental health issues, substance abuse, fear of retaliation, past incidents, or frustration with police. Some cases this year were also omitted because the victims were found beaten to death, but no suspects could be identified. In addition, the report does not take into account the large number of sexual assaults, especially on homeless women.

Federal bias crime laws enacted subsequently have provided additional coverage. The Hate Crimes Statistics Act of 1990 (HCSA) mandates the Justice Department to collect data from law enforcement agencies about "crimes that manifest evidence of prejudice based upon race, religion, sexual orientation, or ethnicity."<sup>3</sup> The Hate Crimes Sentencing Enhancement Act, enacted as a section of the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994, defines a hate crime as "a crime in which the defendant intentionally selects a victim, or in the case of a property crime, the property that is the object of the crime, because of the actual or perceived race, color, national origin, ethnicity, gender, disability, or sexual orientation of any person." This measure only applies to, inter alia, attacks and vandalism which occur in national parks and on federal property.<sup>4</sup>

The most recent piece of legislation, Local Law Enforcement Hate Crimes Prevention Act (H.R. 1343, S. 625), introduced in the 107th Congress, stands to strengthen existing federal hate crime laws in two ways. First, it would expand the current law to reach all the cases where individuals kill or injure others because of bias against religion, color, national origin or race. Second, it would expand the U.S. Department of Justice's ability to prosecute individuals who commit violent crimes against individuals because of their gender, disability, or sexual orientation. There is currently no federal criminal prohibition against violent crimes directed at individuals because of their housing status.

H.R. 1343/S. 625 had broad bipartisan support, with 250 co-sponsors in the House and 51 co-sponsors in the Senate. These companion bills are expected to be reintroduced in the current session of the 108th Congress. The National Coalition for the Homeless aims to include housing status in the Local Law Enforcement Hate Crimes Prevention Act and in future pieces of legislation. By including housing status, hate crimes and violent acts toward people experiencing homelessness will be more appropriately handled and prosecuted. Additionally, if victims know that a system is in place to prosecute such crimes, they are more likely to come forward to report these crimes. People who are forced to live and sleep on the streets for lack of an appropriate alternative are in an extremely vulnerable situation, and it is unacceptable that they are not protected by hate crime prevention laws.

A main objective of this report is to educate lawmakers, advocates, and the general public about the problem of hate crimes and violence against people who are homeless in order to instigate change and ensure protection of civil rights for everyone, regardless of their economic circumstances or housing status. As part of its mission, National Coalition for the Homeless is committed to creating the systemic and attitudinal changes necessary to end homelessness. A major component of these changes must include the societal guarantee of safety and protection and a commitment by lawmakers to combat violent acts and hate crimes against people who experience homelessness.

Four-Year Study

Advocates, homeless shelter workers, and National Coalition for the Homeless (NCH) all began to recognize that reports of hate crimes and violent acts against the homeless were increasing with frequency and brutality. As a result, NCH began publishing annual reports documenting hate crimes and violent attacks against people experiencing homelessness in 1999. These annual reports have not only served to document the number of deaths and non-lethal attacks, but have included the individual stories of the victims of these crimes. This four-year study makes evident the great number of crimes as well as the large geographic area in which they occur

Total number of deaths over 4 years (1999 – 2002): 123

Total number of non-lethal attacks over 4 years (1999 – 2002): 89

Number of different cities where crimes took place: 98

Number of states and Puerto Rico: 34

NCH developed a point system for cities and states where hate crimes had occurred. A city was awarded two points for each death and one point for each non-lethal act.

SEVEN HOMELESS MEN KILLED IN DENVER

Seven homeless men have been found dead in Denver in the trendy Lower Downtown district. Two were beheaded. All of the men were beaten to death, one so savagely that his skull was in pieces. And at least two others were severely beaten.

The most persistent street rumor is that a pack of young men is picking on homeless people for sick thrills. In the only case so far with a witness, someone told the police that several juvenile male suspects were seen beating a homeless man in a downtown alley in early September.

They "may get a sort of high or thrill by beating up people, and homeless are such an easy target," said Police Lt. Judith Will. "It's sad and tragic."

John Parvensky, director of the Colorado Coalition for the Homeless, said, "It is just as important to find and bring the killers to justice as it is to find the murderer of Jon-Benet Ramsey."

HOMELESS MAN KIDNAPPED AND ATTACKED

Two men kidnapped Tommy Council, a homeless man. They tied him up and poured battery acid on his genitals while they threatened to kill him with the drop cord they had tied around his neck. One of the men, Leroy Thaggard, Jr., is in jail with $150,000 bail, but the other is still at large.

HIT-AND-RUN VICTIM LIVED FOR TWO DAYS WHILE TRAPPED IN WINDSHEILD

In early March of 2002, police learned that Gregory Glenn Biggs lived for two or three days after he was hit, lying on a car hood in a southeast Fort Worth garage, his body trapped in the windshield. Despite Biggs' pleas, police said the driver refused to help and left him to die. Afterward, the body was dumped in the park.

The medical examiner's office told police that Biggs suffered no internal injuries and apparently died from loss of blood and shock. Records listed Biggs' address as a homeless shelter.

"I'm going to have to come up with a new word. Indifferent isn't enough. Cruel isn't enough to say. Heartless? Inhumane? Maybe we've just redefined inhumanity here," said Richard Alpert, a Tarrant County assistant district attorney.

HOMELESS MAN DIES AFTER HE BEING SET ON FIRE

After eight days of pain, Dennis R. Wade, 47, died due to third-degree burns. Sleeping on the porch of an abandoned house, Wade was set on fire and suffered from burns over 80% of his body. Reportedly, Wade told paramedics at the scene, "I can't believe they set me on fire." Despite Wade's initial stability, his brother reported, "He has no skin. The damage is done. He is not going to make it."

Recommendations For Action

The National Coalition for the Homeless recommends that the following actions be taken:

1. A public statement by the U.S. Department of Justice acknowledging that hate crimes and/or violence against people experiencing homelessness is a serious national trend.
2. A database to be maintained by the U.S. Department of Justice, in cooperation with the National Coalition for the Homeless, to track hate crimes and/or violence against people who become homeless.
3. Inclusion of housing status in the pending federal hate crimes legislation.
4. Sensitivity/Awareness training at police academies and departments nationwide for trainees and police officers on how to deal effectively and humanely with people who become homeless in their communities.
5. A General Accounting Office (GAO) investigation into the nature and scope of hate crimes and/or violent acts and crimes that occur against people experiencing homelessness. This proposed study will address the following: causes of hate crimes/violence; circumstances that contribute to or were responsible for the perpetrators' behavior, beliefs held by the perpetrators of these crimes and how their beliefs have changed since conviction, thoughts and advice from the perpetrators to others who are considering hate crimes/violence against the homeless population; and community education, prevention and law enforcement strategies.

Two Maryland Police Officers Indicted

Two police officers, Cpl. James C. Partenza and Cpl. Mark Elie, were indicted for beating and unleashing a dog on a homeless man. Hector Millan, 28, allegedly broke into a gas station and was consequently arrested; however, a third officer told his supervisors that despite claims that Millan protested and fought against his arrest, brute force was employed by the police officers without justification.

When the police officers found him, Millan raised his arms to surrender, but Partenza struck the homeless man's head with his baton and Elie unleashed the dog.

Millan said the dog bit his ankle and one arm, and showed a scar on his head that he said was caused by the officer's baton.

Partenza and Eli are both charged with first-degree and second-degree assault, reckless endangerment and misconduct in the office.

Homeless Man Beaten To Death—Caught On Videotape

Hidden in the shadows, Floyd Mummert, 64, was brutally beaten to death as he lay asleep in a lobby of a building on West Wacker Drive. The morning security guard noticed that Mummert, a regular in the area, did not appear to be moving or breathing. The guard checked Mummert and found his dead body lying in blood. A surveillance video captured the killing on tape, which revealed a man entering the lobby in the very early morning hours of February 10, 2002. On tape, the man is shown looking around the lobby, holding an object in his hand.

Law enforcement officials and Mummert's family called the killing ruthless. "We're hoping justice is done...that they find the person who did this," said his step-mother.

His step-mother described her son as "an avid reader and passionate about baseball, often spent afternoons with his nephews playing ball in his parents' back yard." He spent two years in the U.S. Army.

Man Pleads Guilty In Homeless Beating

Asleep in an abandoned trailer, Jeffrey Haraughty, 39, was asleep when Michael Williams, 23, beat the sleeping man to death with a 2-by-4. Haraughty worked at a local restaurant and when he did not come to work for several days, the manager went to the trailer in search of him.

“Police said Haraughty was popular in the neighborhood and news of his death saddened business owners and other homeless people alike.”

Williams was visiting a friend, Mark Warren, who owned the property where the trailer was parked. “Warren has complained to Williams about ‘these bums’ who were living on his land.” After a night of drinking, Williams just went to Haraughty’s trailer and started “whaling on this guy’s head” with the wooden board. The many blows crushed the victim’s skull.

Williams pleaded guilty to murder. According to his public defender, Erik Nickel, “He’s very remorseful. He knows he got out of hand, and he doesn’t know why. He wanted to take responsibility for it.” As Judge Jerry Polaha noted, “This was human being who was sleeping and you took away his life in a brutal fashion. And that deserves a life term.”

Williams was sentenced to life in prison.

Homeless Man Killed And Another Wounded By A Man In A Trench Coat

Sleeping, Kenneth Massie, in his 50s, was shot and killed next to his dear friend, Victor Mullin, 54, who was also shot, but survived. The masked gunman, an unknown suspect about 6 feet tall dressed in a dark trench coat or rain jacket, walked past the campsite on a levee and quickly fired several rounds from his pistol.

A Loaves and Fishes staff member said, “Friends said he preferred Louis L’Amour novels and ramen to drinking or drugs.”

Supporters and friends described Massie as “a homeless man who defied the stereotype. People were devastated that anyone would hurt him. They all ask: ‘Why Kenneth?’ He would fetch food for newcomers too shy to seek out breakfast.”

Tim Brown, executive director of Loaves and Fishes, said the shooting is a result of a worsening economy and harsh words against homeless people on radio talk shows.

Carlos Stewart, 21, the son of an El Sobrante woman who offered Rafael Chavez, 55, shelter, killed him. During the spring months, Chavez painted houses in the area and one day knocked on the door of Stewart's mother, Sheila Bush. After living with Bush for two months, Chavez was forced out because Stewart "didn't want him around." Chavez was found bludgeoned to death. Despite the son's denial that he hit or killed the homeless man, Stewart is being held by the police. The police indicated that Stewart did call his brother in an attempt to dispose of the body.

His friend provided him shelter for the evening, but in the morning Nieckarz was found unconscious.

Nieckarz's father said, "[He] was an alcoholic, and, at the time of his death he was a homeless man. But he certainly had a family who loved him and they were always glad to see him."

David Cright, 19, pleaded guilty for the murder of Nieckarz. Cright told police that he had gotten into a fight with the homeless man, but claims that he only hit the man only once in the head. year-old juvenile brutally attacked King. Friends of King sensed trouble the night of his murder, when the three men passed through King's campsite. A fellow homeless man, Kenny Segrest explained, "The teenagers claimed they were going fishing, but none of them had fishing poles. One of the teenagers threw a beer bottle over the hill, and King told them not to litter because this was his home. They [the teenagers] called him a bum and got up in his face and asked him what he was going to do about it."

Although the teenagers left the site, they soon returned to attack King and a fellow homeless man, William Porter. A good friend, Jason Scarberry, found King's body near his home of 20 years surrounded by a "picnic table, a campfire pit, mailbox, makeshift coat rack, crates filled with cooking utensils, and an American flag." Scarberry said, "Somebody killed him just to be mean."

The three men were indicted in January 2003 with first-degree murder and malicious wounding. Bailey and Day are both being charged as adults. Day is scheduled to go on trial in April of 2003. and the juvenile is still awaiting news whether he will be transferred to adult status. Cabell County Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Brent Walters stated, "Anytime there's a crime dealing with deadly violence, we're always going to look at trying juveniles as adults. Especially if they are over the age of 14."

Born in 1950, King grew up in Huntington and spent much of his life in the area. A husband and a father of two girls, he loved the outdoors from childhood. Darlene Carter, King's wife and mother of his children said, "Even though he had a roof over his head, he would go to the riverbank and left for weeks at a time. He would catch fish and run back to the house and tell us that he had dinner ready for us. When we would go down there, he would sweep and rake the riverbank until it looked like a beach on the Florida coast." King entered

"His nerves got real bad, so he started drinking. He never put the bottle down after that," said his wife. In turn, he lived outdoors and chose to be homeless despite pleas from his family and friends.

The arrest of the three men was fast and efficient—Police Captain Steven Hall explained, public outrage and information offered coupled with fine detective work lead to the arrests. “We appreciate it, and so do the other people who continue to live on the street despite the danger and difficulty.”

Three Teenagers Charged With Murdering Homeless Woman

Kelly Rhae Craft, 44, was found dead in a parking lot following a brutal attack by three South King County teenagers. Jesse Morgan, 18, Lamont Caw, 17 and Shaddie Graham, 17, were hanging out nearby when they started to discuss a crack-cocaine deal with the homeless woman. Morgan stated that he had never met the woman and was defensive when she reached for his pocket. In turn, he started to slap and punch her—suddenly all three men were kicking and hitting her.

“Dennis LaFarlette said he couldn’t understand why anyone would want to kill ‘a downtrodden and defenseless, homeless woman’ who loved music and wildlife.”

Witnesses say Morgan persuaded Graham to go with him to the parking lot and they were later “amped up” and “high-fivin” each other boasting about beating someone up.

Craft grew up in Jackson, Mississippi. She had a degree in biology and served in the U.S. Coast Guard. In touch with her nephew and sister, Dennis and Marilyn LaFarlette, she was known to live with friends in the Seattle area. Although unsure of the exact reason for Craft’s homelessness, both said that she became severely depressed after her mother died several years before. LaFarlette said, “It’s inconceivable that anyone could do something like that.”

All three men were charged with second-degree murder; however, Caw pleaded guilty and faces only a year in jail in return for his testimony against Morgan and Graham. Both Morgan and Graham pleaded not guilty and both could face 10-18 years in jail.

Four Teens Strangle and Beat a Homeless Man to Death

Robert James Nash, 55, was attacked in a north Champaign park where he was intending to spend the night on or about August 8. A couple found his body the morning of August 8. The doctor who performed the autopsy stated that Nash had been struck on his head and chest about 20 to 25 times. He had also been strangled. Nash had suffered from bleeding and bruising in the brain, six fractured ribs, a broken sternum, and five teeth were knocked out.

The police had no leads on the case until a mysterious letter arrived stating that four teenagers had committed the crime. The letter listed Nathaniel White, 16, Ricky King Jr., 15, Corinthian Howard, 17, and Kortel Burks, 17. White gave a statement that he and the other boys were walking in the park when Mr. Nash approached them mumbling and with his hand in his pocket. White then cursed at him and punched him in the face, knocking him to the ground, he then began kicking him. White said he believed that Mr. Nash had a knife, but he conceded to police that when Nash fell to the ground he could see he didn't have a knife. The three other boys joined in with kicking and stomping on Mr. Nash. The boys claim to have left Mr. Nash alive. Mr. Nash had a sister and cousin in the area who he occasionally stayed with, they testified at the trials of the boys. David Nash, Mr. Nash's youngest son, was also present at the trial. Mr. Nash raised his three sons on his own.

“When they took him away from me, it seemed they took God from me.” said David Nash at the murder trial of his father.

White was tried as an adult and convicted of murder on March 13. He is awaiting sentencing, which could be 20 to 60 years. Howard pleaded guilty to first-degree murder and was sentenced to 20 years in prison, prosecutors said he will serve the entire sentence. The other two are awaiting trial.

Enraged, he stepped on the gas and drove to within 3 feet of the vagrant, who Gallego said pulled up his pants and tried unsuccessfully to scale the wall behind him.”

With the homeless man pinned against the wall, Gallego called the police and insisted that they hurry, otherwise he was going to “smash the guy up against the wall with his truck.” Police arrived and found the homeless man with only minor bruises on his arms, and immediately arrested Gallego for the assault; however, Gallego, a well-known active citizen, was released from jail soon after. As a result, Gallego was not officially charged and the investigation was dropped.

Witnesses stated that Vaca turned and said, through the door of the bus, “You are not going to get on my bus.” Then, the homeless man stood in front of the bus; however, Vaca allegedly claimed not to see the man in front of the bus and ran over him.

“Passengers could hear and feel several thumps as the bus began moving,” a bus passenger said. “After yelling at the driver to stop, passengers ran out to see what happened and found the man lying under the bus near the rear wheels, his pants nearly torn off. The homeless man was unresponsive and appeared to be dead.”

Assailants Attack, Cut, Kick And Beat A Homeless Man

On Halloween night, Vance Lybrand, a 49-year-old homeless man, was attacked and severely beaten by three teenagers. Sleeping in a plywood shelter on Archer Street, the three teens, Chanda Miller, 18, her boyfriend, James Gardner, 18 and an unidentified youth savagely kicked and hit him with a “spiked bracelet, metal pipe, a 2-by-4, and a roll of duct tape.” Suffering injuries that included “a severed finger, a broken clavicle, several facial lacerations, broken ribs and a punctured lung,” Lybrand regained consciousness the following morning and walked to a nearby restaurant for help. He was taken immediately to receive medical attention and to speak with police.

After receiving Lybrand’s description, the police looked for Miller because she was known to “be an associate” of Gardner, the man who fit the immediate description. Gardner, soon arrested, told the police that the attack was in self-defense and to “teach Lybrand a lesson.” Previously, Gardner and Miller had harassed and fought with Lybrand. The evening of the assault, Gardner had been drinking a lot and started to smoke marijuana. Lybrand allegedly came after Gardner with a hammer and at that point Gardner “started giving him [Lybrand] a booty party to the head.” Gardner managed to knock Lybrand down and then enlisted the other two in the beating; the unidentified youth attacked using a piece of plywood and Miller hit the victim with her spiked bracelet. In addition, every time Lybrand was completely sprawled across the pavement, Gardner would climb a chain-link fence and jump down on top of Lybrand.

Despite one attempt to bite the leg of Gardner, Lybrand did not attempt to fight back. Finally, the assailants left the scene; however, within hours they came back to see if Lybrand was still alive. Instead of offering help to the injured man, they began beating him again and stealing $50 from Lybrand's wallet.

Officer Shoots Homeless Man Wielding A Putty Knife

Luis Rafael Objio, a 45 year-old homeless man, was not armed unless a small putty knife is considered a weapon.

Officer Greg Caulley, 40, didn't know for sure what it was, authorities have said, but it was enough to make Caulley fear for his safety when Objio reared back to hurl it at him.

The officer fired three rounds. One hit Objio's stomach; another hit his thigh. Objio will recover. At least two witnesses say they pleaded with the officer not to shoot Objio. Both said they were acquaintances of the homeless man—that he was mentally disabled and generally harmless.

Nora Melton, a local grocery store owner who witnessed the incident, said the shooting was an example of excessive police force. "Rafael wouldn't bother nobody," she said. "I saw the cop gesturing toward him and aggravating him."

Brick Beating Yields Prison Time

On November 9, 2002, Damen Gillespie, 17, and a 14-year-old juvenile, beat and attacked Russell Koonce, 43, until he fell unconscious. Koonce, a homeless man, was invited for a dinner-meal. Laying unconscious on the back porch of Gillespie's apartment, Koonce was severely assaulted by both men with the legs of a chair and bricks—he was missing a part of his ear and was found bleeding from his many wounds nearly 10 hours following the attack. He testified that he suffered from ensuing dizziness and loss of memory, and in addition, was unable to satisfactorily hear. Following the brutal, mob-like attack, the juvenile poked a stick at Koonce to determine if he was still alive. “The victim’s presence today is a testament to the miracle of modern medicine,” reported the judge.

Bloomington police detective, Matthew Dick, said the 14-year-old initially denied involvement, but later admitted throwing four or five bricks at Koonce.

A McLean County judge stated, “[The crime was] a cold and callous disregard for the sanctity of life. In summary, some crimes demand harsh and serious punishment—this is one of them.”

Both juveniles were charged. One is currently serving an indefinite term in juvenile prison, and Gillespie, automatically charged as an adult, is awaiting trial.

Dear Senator/Representative [insert full name],

I am requesting your assistance in seeking a U.S. General Accounting Office (GAO) investigation into the nature and scope of violent acts and hate crimes against people experiencing homelessness. The National Coalition for the Homeless (NCH) is supported in this request by over 400 organizations, including the National League of Cities, National Organization of Women (NOW), and Volunteers of America.

Throughout the nation, people experiencing homelessness, advocates, and service providers report an alarming increase in the number and scope of violent acts against people who lack permanent housing. These accounts include beatings, murders, arson, harassment, and damage of personal property. Homeless men, women, and children around the nation are particularly vulnerable to crimes against them because they represent an easy, visible target and often lack a place to retreat for safety and protection. A GAO investigation would assist Congress and the public in obtaining much-needed information on the extent and scope of violent acts and crimes against people experiencing homelessness. Furthermore, such an investigation would help federal, state, and local officials identify actions that could be taken to prevent and reduce such crimes.

NCH recently released a four-year (1999 – 2002) study that documents hate crimes and violent acts committed against people experiencing homelessness. The full report can be found at <http://www.nationalhomeless.org/>. Between 1999 and 2002 there were 123 deaths and 89 non-lethal attacks representing 98 cities and 34 states and Puerto Rico. The youngest victim was four months old, the oldest was seventy-six years old. (insert state information if relevant: Such as the ranking for your state or city) A study by the GAO would aid in protecting one of the most vulnerable populations in our society.

A Call to Investigate the Violent Acts and Crimes Committed Against People Experiencing Homelessness

Over the past several years advocates and homeless shelter workers from around the country have received news reports of men, women and even children being harassed, kicked, set on fire, beaten to death, and even decapitated. Over the last four years alone (1999 through 2002) there have been 212 acts of violence, resulting in 123 deaths of people experiencing homelessness, and 89 victims of non-lethal violence. These incidents took place in 98 different cities from 34 states and Puerto Rico. The perpetrators were housed individuals.

NCH calls on Congress for a General Accounting Office (GAO) investigation into the nature and scope of violent acts and crimes that occur against people experiencing homelessness. People who are forced to live and sleep on the streets for lack of an appropriate alternative are in extremely vulnerable situations. We must ensure protection of civil rights for everyone, regardless of their economic circumstances or housing status. Please take a moment to sign on below.
